WORKING CONDITIONS

Physical Demands

There is considerable physical activity involved in helping people to move, bath, dress and perform other daily activities. The incumbent may be required to lift heavy items or be on their feet for long periods of time.

The incumbent is required to work in limited and restrictive space like the resident's washroom. This awkward bending or twisting promotes poor body mechanics and can lead to injury.

Environmental Conditions

The incumbent is at risk for injury while transporting residents and community clients and can be exposed to volatile situations as a front-line worker. Assisting residents with care may expose the incumbent to human waste and work may involve unpleasant visual images (situations or events).

Sensory Demands

All senses must be acutely aware in observing residents and community clients and their environment.

Mental Demands

The environment is dynamic and constantly changing. Therefore, the incumbent has no control over their work pace.

Dealing with difficult residents or community clients can be frustrating and stressful.

Family members can occasionally be demanding and lack understanding of the limits to the personal service plan of residents.
